Interim Budget dampens sentiment

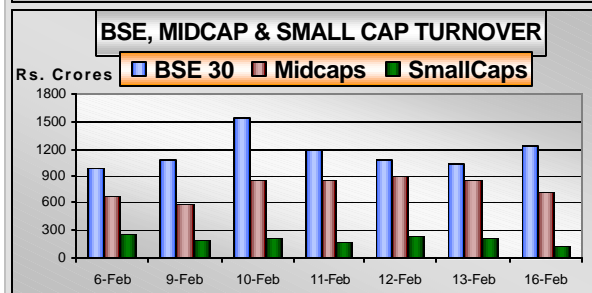

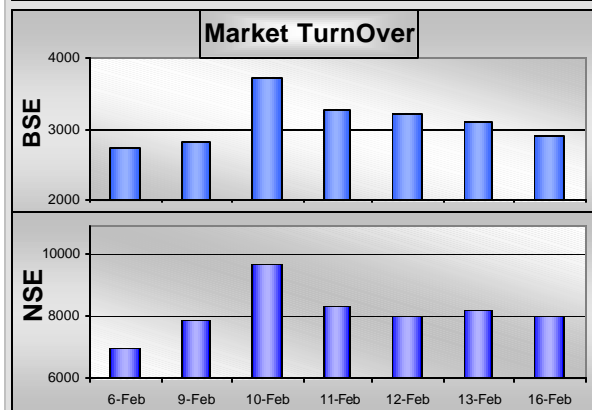

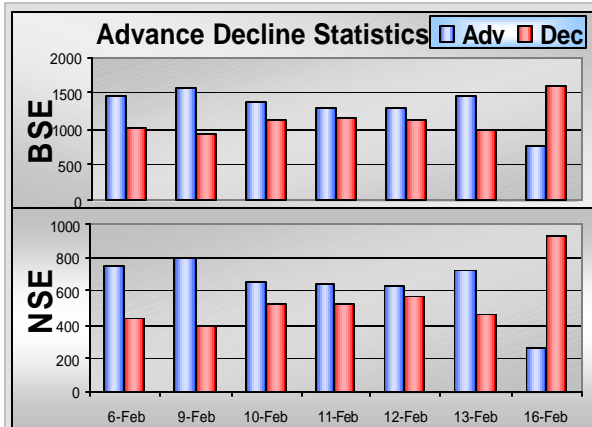

The nothing-done Interim Budget was taken negatively by the markets as the indices fell by 3.5%. There was no strength visible from the 1st hour. The rally, which started from 2662 level, is decisively terminated and a lower bottom also has been established against the earlier peak of 3146. A rising trend line connecting the bottom of 2662 and 2755 is about to break while a similar trend line in Sensex is broken. Advance/decline ratio has turned negative at 1:2 and sentiment is battered.

Market Forecast

Trend reversed

All euphoria developed on last Friday has fizzled out as the daily trend turned down. The important support level of 2875 is broken decisively. The next important support level is now at 9150/2825 and the final one at 9000/2750. The upside is now capped at 9700/2950 and the resistance for the day is seen near 9500/2900. A weekly closing below 8950/2750 will turn down the weekly trend as well. Look out for exiting from your long position at every rally till the trend is stabilized.

- Trend = The direction of the price movement.
- Reversal = The price level at which the trend will reverse.
- Period = Number of days/weeks/months since the trend is up/down.
- When the Trend is positive and if the closing for the next period is below the reversal value, then the trend would turn negative.
- When the Trend is positive and if the closing for the next period is above the reversal value, then the upward trend would remain intact.
- When the Trend is negative and if the closing for the next period is above the reversal value, then the trend would turn positive.
- When the Trend is negative and if the closing for the next period is below the reversal value, then the downward trend would remain intact.
- Support/Resistance levels are generated objectively and based on formula.
- If the closing is near to or less than 1% of the reversal value, then it is highlighted indicating that the trend is likely to change from its current course.
