About Central and State Government Securities

- Government Securities (G-sec and T-bills) are securities issued through RBI on behalf of Central Governments to meet their borrowing requirements
- State Development Loans (SDL) are securities issued through RBI on behalf of State Governments to meet their borrowing requirements and are also considered as part of the government securities market
- Redeemed at face value on maturity
- Available in varied maturity tenors

Benefits of Investing

- Competitive returns compared to fixed deposits (FDs)
- G-sec and T-bills can be used as cash component for collateral with applicable haircuts
- Assured Periodic Returns – regular stream of coupon payments every six months
- Available across maturities, so investors can invest as per their goals
- Safer investment alternative to diversify your portfolio
- May provide capital appreciation depending on interest rate cycles
- No tax deducted at source
